A HISTORY OF THE FACULTY OF MARITIME STUDIES

The Rijeka Faculty of Maritime Studies can trace its origins back to the year 1866 when, in the premises of the today's City Hospital, the Austro-Hungarian Naval Academy was founded and which flourished in its activities till 1914. In 1889 it became the Imperial and Royal Naval Academy (Marine Academie) .

At the outbreak of the First World War, the Academy was closed and moved from Rijeka to Vienna. It is important to notice that some famous Croats, Admiral Maximilian Njegovan (1858-1930) and the noble Admiral Janko Vuković-Podkapelski (1871-1918), a distinguished officer in the Austro-Hungarian navy appointed as the first commander-in-chief of the navy of the State of the Slovenes, Croats and Serbs, graduated from the Academy.

The education at the Academy included a four-year study programme attended by all those coming from across the Austro-Ungarian Monarchy and holding an A-level secondary school diploma. The Academy ceased its activities in 1914 when it turned into a field hospital functioning as such till 1918, when, after the fall of the Austro-Ungarian Monarchy, it was transformed into the main City Hospital.

This break into the field of maritime higher education lasted till 1949, when, on 4th April 1949, the Rijeka Merchant Marine College was founded by the decree issued by the Government of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia. In the years to follow, the Rijeka Merchant Marine College developed into the Faculty of Maritime Studies and is still today one of the world's leading maritime education and training institutions.

Since the very beginning of its educational activities, the Rijeka Merchant Marine College has experienced several stages in its development:

- In 1978, the Merchant Marine College was transformed into the Faculty of Maritime Studies and Transportation. Its activities continued until 1998, when two independent educational institutions were established – the Rijeka College of Maritime Studies and the University Department of Maritime Studies of the University of Rijeka.
- In the course of the year 2001, the Ministry of Science and Technology of the Republic of Croatia brought a decision on the merge of the Department of Maritime Studies of the University of Rijeka and the Rijeka College of Maritime Studies into the Faculty of Maritime Studies of the University of Rijeka, the one and only maritime education and training institution that has been acting as such since then.

LOGISTICS AND MANAGEMENT IN MARITIME AFFAIRS AND TRANSPORT

The study programme Logistics and Management in Maritime Affairs and Transport is the continuation of the already existing study in Maritime Transport Technology that has been lectured at the Faculty of Maritime Studies in Rijeka for years. The study programme is based on the needs and requirements of the market asking for a qualified and trained staff able to lead the whole process of transporting goods from the initial point of departure to the final destination by using the most recent technological and economic concepts. Students graduating from such a study should be able to make a valuable contribution aiming at meeting the needs of transport and transshipment, of a coordinated economic development, of the price stability, of improving the traffic of goods and passengers and the standards of living as well. The study programme faces its application in different branches of maritime economy and in different scientific fields, thus representing the basis for successful activities of shipping companies and for that of competent public and civil authorities as well. After graduating from the Faculty, the students are prepared for work in institutions the activities of which are closely connected with maritime affairs, as well as in shipping, transport and business companies responsible for the realization and management of transport services.

The undergraduate study programme is grounded in training students to be able to perform a wide variety of works in various areas of logistics and management in maritime affairs and transport. The courses deal with technology, maritime economics, law, techniques in the rationalization and optimization of sea and inland transport services. The acquired knowledge will enable the graduates to find work in many institutions of their proper field as well as to organize successfully the transport operations in different publicly- or privately-owned maritime and transport companies closely associated with maritime practice.
